Beech-Nut Nutrition

The Beech-Nut Company was founded in 1891 as the Imperial Packing Company. The company quickly diversified into many food products and began making baby food in 1931.

From the beginning, Beech-Nut was an industry innovator. They were the first to put baby food in glass jars, when everyone else was using lead-soldered metal cans. Over the years, the company had many other firsts, including removing salt from all baby food, making it easier for parents to follow the recommendations of the American Academy of Pediatrics. Beech-Nut Stages System offers the first complete line of baby food with no unnecessary additives.

The company introduced the first baby food with DHA, an important nutrient naturally occurring in breast milk that helps support the mental and visual development of your child. The company was located in Canajoharie for many years and has recently relocated to Amsterdam, New York.
