Revere Copper Products

With 200 years of history, Revere Copper Products stands proud as one of America's oldest companies and one of the world's top copper and brass suppliers. The famous patriot, Paul Revere, founded the company in 1801, when he was the first to roll copper in the New World.

Over the centuries, one copper innovation after another has originated with Revere. Pre-patinated copper, tin/zinc coated copper, copper shingles and superior bare copper adorn residences, businesses and institutions around the globe. The company has proven its architectural expertise as well as the ability to reliably deliver quality sheet, strip, coil, plate, bar and extrusions for a wide variety of critical applications, including electrical, telecommunications, air-conditioning and many others. It is the number one brand of stainless steel cookware in the United States and is recognized for its legendary quality and durability.

Revere Copper Products has its rolling and extrusion plant in Rome, New York, where copper has been produced since the 1840's. By the 1920's, Rome was known as "The Copper City" because one-tenth of all copper used in America for manufacturing came through the mills in Rome.
